b) Problems reported in JMI implementation

The table above, combined with reports of TWGs on their progress in implementing their work plans, reveals a number of constraints in JMI implementation. These include the following:

- The financial support is still problem, the funding has not been committed.
- Fund disbursement is late.
- Lack sharing information and participation from concerned ministries/agencies.
- Lack of Human resources.
- International consultant to support the implementation is still needed.
- Procurement procedure for EFA FTI (Education for All Fast Track Initiatives) is too complicated and caused slow cash disbursement, especially for school construction. Slow progress could also be attributed by lack of incentives for the works related to Fast Track Initiative.
- Difficulty of process due to large number of competing claims and large number of government agencies involved in discussions.
- Some TWGs also raise the time constraint in implementing JMI.

CRDB/CDC will prepare a training on results-based concepts and practices for later in 2009 that will help to improve the JMI identification, implementation and management process.
